THE YEAR BOOK OF
HAMPDEN-SIDNEY COLLEGE

VOLUME XXX

PUBLISHED BY THE STUDENTS

NINETEEN HUNDRED TWENTY-FOUR

Foreword

Within the pages of this book we have endeavored to preserve, through picture and print, an accurate record of the events of the college year, blending in as much as possible of the romance, the beauty, and richness that encircle the experiences of college life. We realize that such a record as this is, at its best, only a bare outline of the experiences which can live in their truest significance in the memory of those who have had them. Yet, if, when time has had its course, and the pages of this book no more are white, and when memory is fast failing us, this book will aid in bringing back fond remembrances, in recalling old faces and friendships, and the joys and sorrows of the days which sped while we were students at Hampden-Sidney, our work will not have been entirely in vain, and this, the Thirtieth Volume of the KALEIDOSCOPE, will have its raison d'etre.

John Hampden Chamberlayne Bagby

M.A., M.E., PH.D.

PHYSICAL Science in some form has held an important place in the curriculum of Hampden-Sidney College from the beginning. The early records are "too incomplete to permit accurate statements regarding the tenure of office of each man or the subjects assigned to him." But, at least, from the coming of Dr. Jonathan P. Cushing in 1819, Natural Philosophy and Chemistry constituted a distinct department. Some of the heads of this Department of Physical Science were men of marked ability and of unusual attainments. Among the most eminent, of course leaving out of account the present members of the department, were, perhaps, President Cushing, the reorganizer of the College and a man of nation-wide reputation; John W. Draper, physician, chemist and writer; F. J. Mettauer, the versatile scholar and the skillful surgeon; Joseph R. Wilson, scientist, theologian and teacher, best known as the father of our late President, Woodrow Wilson; Lewis L. Holladay, the Christian gentlemen and moulder of men.

As the successor of men like these, there came to Hampden-Sidney in 1892 a slender young man fresh from his university work. This man is still here. He is no longer slender, but shows the sturdy frame and deep chest of the Chamberlaynes. The dark hair is now gray, and the smooth-shaven face of thirty-two years ago is now covered with a beard close-cropped and white. This does not mean, however, that the subject of this sketch is an old man—though the immature and frivolous doubtless consider him old—for Dr. J. H. C. Bagby was born some months after the close of the war between the states; the day was July 20, 1867, and the place was Middleburg, in the fine old county of Loudoun, where "burly Blue Ridge echoes strong," as it gradually falls away into the foothills of Piedmont Virginia.

He is the oldest living son of Dr. George W. Bagby and Lucy Parke Chamberlayne—the father the most conspicuous and forceful writer of the Virginia of his day; the mother, in a more contracted sphere, known as a "doer of deeds," as an organizer of schemes for the relief of human suffering, one who will long be remembered for her work in promoting the preservation of Virginia antiquities (colonial, antebellum and Confederate), and as the embodiment and representative of the civilization of the old South, whence she sprung and of which she was a part.

The Bagby family remained in Middleburg for a short time only, then moved to Gordonsville, Virginia, for a brief space, and in the early seventies took up residence in Richmond, Virginia, where the father continued his literary work while discharging the duties of State Librarian.

In passing, it may not be amiss to state that our professor was named for his uncle, Capt. John Hampden Chamberlayne—scholar, soldier, orator, editor—who did things worthy of note in many spheres of activity. His friends—and they were many, for he gripped men to him as with hooks of steel—fondly recall the courageous spirit of the brave young captain who arose from a sick-bed in Petersburg, rode to the Crater, rallied broken and disorganized Southern troops, and led them in a desperate and successful charge. Having passed through a starvation period at Johnson's Island, he returned home and devoted the remainder of his life, mainly in the field of journalism, to the cause of decency and good government in his native state. For a time connected with the Norfolk Landmark, and with the Petersburg Index-Appeal, he established and edited the State—a terror to evil-doers, sparing not the rod of reproof and criticism where wrong and corruption reared their heads.

The young boy, now our reverend colleague, was peculiarly fortunate in having an old-fashioned home; a home of refinement and culture; a home with a background of all that was best, intellectual, moral, social; a home in which the fifth commandment was still law, and in which a sense of personal responsibility was inculcated. He was fortunate, too, in the companionship of his father, who gave direction to his reading and molded his character and tastes. Visitors to the State Library in those days can still remember a little boy curled up in a corner, oblivious to all that was going on around him, engrossed in reading some book of travel or adventure. He was fortunate, also, in enjoying the privilege of meeting his father's friends, a group of cultured gentlemen, who were ever ready to give of their stores of rich experience and varied knowledge. Among these was the scholarly and eloquent Bishop of the Diocese of Southern Virginia, the Right Reverend A. M. Randolph, who recognized the boy's splendid promise and delighted to have him as a companion in his study.

The boy was fortunate, moreover, in his school opportunities. For five years he attended a "dame's school," that of Miss Margaret H. Lee, who had a hand in training many of Richmond's young people of a generation ago. In 1881, he entered the school of Mr. Thos. H. Norwood, a school in which superficiality and shams were not tolerated, but which stood for thorough scholarship and for the development of manly character. In this school Hampden-Sidney men for years had a monopoly of the mathematical department—Peyton H. Hoge (1876), A. A. Little (1880), and J. H. Davis (1883), being among the most successful of Mr. Norwood's assistants.

In the fall of 1885, young Bagby entered the University of Virginia, then the foremost institution of learning in this country save, possibly, Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore. In June, 1888, after a brilliant career as a student, he received the Master's degree—in those days the coveted goal of undergraduate effort. In college, he was a marked man, not only because of his class room record, but also because of the prominent part taken in the general intellectual life of the University. He was a member of the Delta Kappa Epsilon Fraternity, of the Jefferson Literary Society, and of the Eli Bananas—the leading social organization in the College. He was the first editor of Corks and Curls, having associated with him in this work men since famous in various walks of life—Albert Latady, of Mobile, Ala.; C. L. Minor, of Asheville, N. C., one of the leading specialists in the country in the diagnosis and treatment of tuberculosis; W. S. Cockrell, of the Supreme Court of Florida; George Gordon Battle, prominent leader of the New York bar.

Inheriting his father's literary taste and gift of expression, young Bagby took great interest in the University Magazine and was an influential member of its staff along with L. C. Baker, G. G. Battle, Alfred Byrd and others.

For two sessions, 1888-89 and 1889-90, Mr. Bagby was instructor in the University School in Nashville, Tennessee, owned and presided over by Clarence B. Wallace (1880), and, while so engaged, took work in Vanderbilt University. Returning to the University of Virginia for the session 1890-91, he won the degree of Mechanical Engineer in June, 1891, at the time hoping to be able to devote himself to this branch of engineering. Later, however, this avenue seemed closed to him, and, in the fall of 1891, he accepted a position with the Life Insurance Company of Virginia and worked in the home office of that company for a few months, resigning to become assistant in the Department of Physics of the University of Virginia, of which department Professor Francis H. Smith was the head. Thus the young man had the privilege of close contact with that remarkable man who so long was an outstanding figure of the faculty of that institution.

In June, 1892, the Board of Trustees of Hampden-Sidney College chose this gifted and thoroughly trained young scientist to be the head of the Department of Physical Science here—a department which then embraced Physics, Chemistry, Astronomy, Geology, and Physiology; and most, if not all, of this work devolved upon the head of the department. While discharging the duties of his chair with distinguished ability and marked success, Professor Bagby was able to do privately the remaining work required for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy, and this degree was awarded him by the University of Virginia in 1894. The subject of his thesis for the Doctorate was: On Cases of Divided Circuits of Lines in a Magnetic Field.

From the time of his coming to Hampden-Sidney, the story of the professor's life, like that of so many of his fellow-craftsmen in Pedagogy, consists of "short and simple annals of the poor." The daily routine of the class-room, experimental work in the laboratory, private research and study have resulted in rich accomplishments which yield dividends not to be credited on journal or ledger, but stamps deep and lasting impressions on the characters and minds of men.

In all these years, Dr. Bagby has found time for much not included in his departmental schedule. For a time, before the presidency of Dr. J. G. McAllister, he was acting president of the College; for years, 1905-1919, he was vice-president, and, as such, was often entirely responsible for the management of the office and for the maintenance of discipline. He has served on most of the important committees of the faculty, and for him committee appointment means performance of its duties; his tireless industry, his clear thinking, and his clock-like punctuality have made him invaluable to his associates. He is clerk of the faculty, too, and to keep this work up, as he does, it involves much labor and makes heavy demands on his time.

As ranking member of the Library Committee, he has practically shaped the policy of the Library, and has done most of the work connected with that most important agency of the College. Among other things, he has, with his own hands, made a card catalogue containing more than thirty thousand cards, which includes all the books in the Library except the Government publications.

No record of Dr. Bagby's activities would be complete which did not include that monumental work, "A General Catalogue of the Alumni of the College, 1776-1906," which contains, besides the lists of alumni, lists of the members of the Board of Trustees, of the Faculty, and other officers, and of those upon whom honorary degrees have been conferred. This has been supplemented by an additional pamphlet covering the years 1907-1916. The time required for this compilation covered four years—and it was a labor of love. Practically without assistance this busy man performed for the College a service of inestimable value. But for his patience and enthusiasm this work would, in all probability, never have been done.

As this sketch is not intended as an obituary notice or a post-mortem examination, no analysis of Dr. Bagby's personality and character is attempted; for those who know him, no appraisal of the man is necessary. It need only be said in conclusion that in capacity for work, in rapidity and accuracy of mental process, in keen analysis, in marvelous tenacity of memory, in precision of statement, in breadth and profundity of scholarship, and in loyalty to high ideals, few are the equals of the man who, for thirty-two years, has held the chair of Physical Science in Hampden-Sidney College.

"NEAL"

One of a long line of Hampden-Sidney personages, bearing his surname, is Neal. Indeed, his ancestry lays such claim to membership in the Tiger institution that a well-joined chain might easily represent the Bedinger hold upon Hampden-Sidney. Neal's credentials for membership in the Ancestor's Club are this chain which has rightly permitted him to take an active interest in the renowned organization.

Neal is quiet, an earnest worker, but somewhat of a surpriser. For instance, last year with a Freshman as a co-partner, he won a debate from Lynchburg College by a unanimous vote of the judges; it was Hampden-Sidney's only oratorical victory for the year. Another time he used his stealth on us was in 1922—just after Christmas. Neal "up" and got married while all were away celebrating. We believe yet that the nuptials took him as suddenly as it took us by surprise. Even now we drink a "glass of the finest" to the health of the bride and groom.

Persistence is a quality not present in every man's constitution; it is in Neal. The paths have not been so smooth for the Charlotte Court House lad, and while he has been in difficulties which would have caused the withdrawal from college of most boys, he has plugged his way to a degree.

Neal is entering the Seminary to pursue his religious studies. As his life at Hampden-Sidney has been permeated with Christianity, so it must be, not only at the Seminary, but throughout all his life.

"BITT"

A tramp is heard, and then another and another until a low, measured tread like that of a cop on his beat or a man in distress is heard below. Don't be alarmed, it is only "Bit" studying, and the fact that he has walked through to two successive scholarships proves that his method, though unique, has not been used in vain.

Four years ago "Matsu" entered Hampden-Sidney the baby of our class. Today he is still our youngest classmate and also president of the Student Council and, behold—the editor of this volume of the Kaleidoscope.

Not only as a student has "Bit" starred, but he is also something of an athlete. Besides being an enthusiastic follower of all branches of athletics, "Bit" is our star performer on the tennis court where he has, on several occasions, not only distinguished himself, but also extinguished his opponents in a most convincing way.

Though a good mixer, and a "hail fellow well met," Henry has never seemed to bother his head over the wiles and smiles of the fairer sex. He takes them all as a matter of course and says nothing.

As a leader on the campus, "Bit" has few equals, partly because he is always ready to help pull, and not drive. Sincerity and unselfishness mark his every act. Many a fellow he has helped along with his work, many a good word he has put in at the office for some one who, he thinks, deserves something. If generosity were a fault, "Old Dr." would be beyond redemption.

"Bit" you have won our hearts, and in losing you—the student, athlete, orator, and the truest of friends—Alma Mater is giving to the world a man's man.

"HUSKY"

North, a little town on the Eastern Shore, is destined to become famous for producing this fair-haired, blue-eyed, short and chubby youngster. Never in the long and glorious history of Hampden-Sidney has there been but this one Curtis Ashby Brown. There has been Curtises, there have been Ashbys, there have even been Browns, there have been those who have sharked in Latin and Chem., there have been those who love to play tennis, who could play bridge, who smoked cigarettes, who slept fourteen hours a day, who loved the salt sea water—I say there may have been all these individually, but here we have the combination of them all.

Surely the goddess of fortune must have smiled on "Husky's" birth, for seldom has anyone gone through college with as little trouble as he. While the rest of us are knee-deep in study, "Husky" will be found reading, playing tennis or sleeping; yet busting a ticket is an experience almost foreign to him. And when reports come out, the grades of this loyal son of the land of potatoes arouse the envy of students far more laborious than he. "Husky" is of the kind that stands up for his rights, and we are sure that he will have them as he goes up against the world.

Whose friend is he? Well--everybody's.

He's from Drakes Branch. They say "the old home town" got its name from some renowned Drake. He "caters" to Mathematics and early discovered that "a straight line is the shortest distance between two points." He applies this in all that he does, therefore you can "count" on him and no one but himself can be his "parallel."

Although he thinks a lot of his ancestors, he does not rest in the shade of his family tree. He has earned an enviable reputation as a conscientious student.

No matter when or where you see "Cater," he is always the same---good-natured, friendly, and unassuming, with a bubbling vein of mirth underneath his quiet bearing. He is the kind of a fellow whose friendship wears well and, after all, what better compliment can one pay?

"BILL"

As a leader in almost every branch of student activity, "Bill" has proven himself an invaluable element of the school. He is the embodiment of the Tiger spirit, and all who come in contact with him are inspired by it.

Whatever may be said of "Bill," it cannot be said that he is one of the quiet, unobtrusive kind. In fact, his chief joy is in an argument, and the hotter the argument the better he likes it. He is often heard more than he is seen. But he not only talks—he acts. A strong man, in whatever project he directs his energies, he is a force to be reckoned with.

He does nothing in a half-hearted way, but goes into a thing with a whole heart, an indomitable spirit, and a determination to win. He is a live wire clean through.

"Bill" has been an invaluable aid to all the teams of Hampden-Sidney, whether fighting on the field or on the side lines as cheer leader. He has been one of Hampden-Sidney's best linesmen on four of her football teams, and was captain of the 1923 eleven. Although an injured back kept him out of a number of games, he was still an inspiration to the team. His spirit went marching on.

"OH, BOY"

Some of us know and some do not, just why we call him "Oh, Boy." At any rate, you may be sure that where one Harris Hill Gee is around, there is the happiest of the happy—always radiating optimism. Some men spend a whole lifetime working for success, but Harris only grins and the world is his. He doesn't care much for worry; he treats everybody alike, and he grins—there you have the secret of it all.

Harris, by the way, hails from Meherrin, another one of those Prince Edward county boys, a native son, so to speak. He brought with him a hearty handshake, a Dodge car, and a strong propensity to make friends. No host is more hospitable than Harris, no friend more generous. He is a good man to withstand the buffets of fortune; hard knocks don't down him; he falls to rise again.

"Oh, Boy" is irresistibly drawn by the attraction of feminine society, and only a philosophic coolness has extricated him from his numerous entanglements with members of the fair sex. From all we can learn by putting two and two together, "Oh, Boy" has his special interests in Farmville. Perhaps the fact that he brought his Dodge to college may serve to prove the aforesaid.

We have said enough. We know that Harris is a worthy addition to the long list of alumni of our Alma Mater.

"SHORTY"

J. G. was one of us who arrived on the Hill in the fall of '20, and, along with the rest of us, he suffered the pains, and enjoyed the pleasures, of our Freshman year. Four years have passed, in the twinkling of an eye, and day by day in every way, "Shorty" has grown dignifieder and dignifieder.

From the instant in his Frosh year when he began to accompany the Chapel piano with his violin, "Shorty" has been a constant and important figure in our musical circles. "Making a violin talk" is play to this long boy of the Shenandoah, and when it is a matter of singing, he is not in our class at all. (The Choir occupies seats behind and above us.) No joking—when "Shorty" has gone, the Choir will lose one of its most valuable and capable leaders.

Socially, too, "Shorty" is right "there," but he missed two Friday nights in town only this session. We have that on good authority—"Miss Mary," herself.

The cheerfulness, contentment, irresponsibility that carries responsibility, and plain old likeableness which characterizes this Tiger will make us miss him greatly when he goes from the Hill.

"POO"

"Poo" is a strange mixture of moods. One moment you find him utterly care-free, vowing that there isn't the slightest thing in the world that worries him, and the next minute he will be head over heels in some Chemistry problem (which, take it from me, would worry anyone), or struggling nobly with his beloved baseball schedule.

The popularity of this youth from Clifton Forge is by no means limited to Hampden-Sidney, for in truth, he is to all intents and purposes more at home by the statue of Joan at the Normal School than he is anywhere else. How many times have we envied the way "Poo" gets along with all the chaperones, especially his "drag" with Miss Mary. As president of the German Club, J. Henry has worked earnestly to improve the social life of the Hill, and his name is invariably coupled with affairs and happenings involving the Terpsichorean art.

With all his foreign affairs and attractions, "Poo" has also entered into many other campus activities, the success of which depended upon his characteristic ability and determination.

"Poo," though at times you seem a little hard to know well, yet those who have been intimately associated with you have found you to be unselfish in nature and always quick to think of the other fellow. Keep up your optimism, the world needs it.

"WAM"

There are many Billys about our campus, but none such as the one who is better known to the Stagger Inn as "Wam."

"Wam" has the unique distinction of having graced our portals but three years and retiring with the elusive sheepskin which many strive for but few attain. How he did this we have never been able to ascertain, as we have never caught him in the act of studying or preparing to retire. But "Wam's" abilities are not confined to the classroom alone, for he holds important offices on many of the staffs, and is always ready to give himself to any of the activities that present themselves. Quite a little of his time is also spent, so it is rumored, at the Normal, where once again "Wam" holds four queens.

As we reluctantly allow this true Tiger to depart, we feel that on account of his broadmindedness and sound judgment, he will be, in the days which are to follow, one of Richmond's most illustrious lawyers.

"BENNIE"

The first day Ben Morgan entered these ivy-clad walls everyone recognized him as a leader of men. It would be hard to enumerate all of the capacities and services of this energetic and likeable boy from Charleston, so let us give only a few.

Ben's literary worth was quickly recognized, and he soon rose from class historian through the ranks of reporter to head the editorial staff of the Tiger in his Junior year. That he succeeded in this latter capacity is well attested by the fact that he was unanimously chosen editor-in-chief of the Magazine in 1924.

Besides being a literati, "Bennie" is also something of an athlete. Captain of three Tiger tennis teams, member of the track squad, and a loyal supporter of all athletics, the college made no mistake when Morgan was elected to a position of honor on the Athletic Council.

Too, Ben has been prominent in the social life of the Hill. Many are the dance committees that he has served on, and his name on any committee is an assurance of the dance. Ask Alice.

"Bennie," we have learned, during the past four years, not only to love you and respect you as a classmate, but as a man of personality, ability, honor, and all those traits which tend, when combined, to form the ideal man. Now, as we part, and go our different ways, Ben, you take with you the sincere good wishes of us all—your pals, the Class of '24.

Ramsey came to us from the metropolis of Madisonville, and has gone far toward putting Madisonville on the map. For few have come to us, quiet, more unassuming, more studious, or more likeable than "Nap."

Charlotte County has contributed many men to Hampden-Sidney, but well may she be proud of "Nap." True to the school's traditions, true to his friends, true to himself, he has quietly stolen into the hearts of all who know him. The Freshmen's idol (he never paddles them), the friend of all, Ramsey is going to be universally missed next year. For with all his quietness, he is a live wire, and has caught honors on every side.

"Nap" has, we believe, made at Hampden-Sidney the start of a promising career. And we are watching him and pulling for him; we know that he is bound to succeed.

"JUMBO"

Four long years ago a quiet, unassuming boy, hailing from the metropolis of Virginia, came to take up his abode on our campus. Not long then it was he began to exhibit that determination and initiative which characterized him so well, for, in the four years that he has been in our midst, he has changed from the fun-loving boy of his Freshman year and chapel-nailing Sophomore to the man who is one of the leaders in school and the friend of everyone, to a man who occupies positions of trust and who not only occupies them, but rather performs the duties connected with them in a manner that requires respect.

The long list of achievements which follow his name is indicative of his hard work and fine character. John is neither brilliant nor, as you might say, gifted, but he has not allowed that to stand in his way. He has been a great asset to the Tiger, and no little credit is due this consistent lad for the success of the 1922 Tiger, of which he was the business manager. Men have scrubbed year after year on the team, but no one more faithfully than John. Last fall he made up his mind to quit the scrubs, and the H he now struts shows that he did.

This all goes to show that you can't keep a good man down, and it takes a good man to be elected to such positions as president of the Senior Class and Y. M. C. A.

And now, John, as you go forth from this old institution to carry on in the world, we wish you Godspeed, and know that success awaits the man who makes, as you have made, such a success of your college life. In the coming years you will be missed, but we rejoice to know that Hampden-Sidney has again given to the world a man.

"BOB"

"I know I just—flun-ked an examination," drawls a deep bass voice, and you know that "Bob" has just come from either Curry's or Bags' class room, steeped in glory, for did you ever know him to flunk an exam? No, and never did he know himself to; yet, until he saw in black and white that he made a first grade, he was ever beside himself.

So the world goes with such as "Bob"—slow, and doubting, but sure. Yes, he gets there just the same, whether it be in classes or with the ladies—these are his pet hobbies.

Around the campus "Bob" goes, easy and quiet, until he gets where there is a good "hull" meeting, and then, he—listens real hard. Now and then he speaks, and when he does, it comes after considerable thought.

Hard work affects some people pretty severely, and so most people thought it would affect Bob, but go back and bring to mind the days when he was a Phi goat. Did any goat ever have to labor harder for a week than Bob did? Why he merely pushed a wheelbarrow around through a foot of snow, in addition to dragging cans, cuckooing, and blowing a whistle.

Hampden-Sidney has grown on "Bob" until he's most Garnet and Gray. Gosh, but we hope he will keep these stripes a long, long time.

"LEE"

You have his picture above, this lad from Petersburg. Quiet? Yes, and unassuming, yet he stepped into the presidency of the Freshman Class with no one but his brother to compete as a close second for the coveted honor. Before his first year he had come into the cynosure as a heady basketball player and a connoiseur of scholastic honors.

As a Sophomore we found him principally at the library, where he had been relegated to keep charge of those "many quaint and curious volumes of forgotten lore" as assistant librarian. Still, he found time for ultra-scholastic activities, warbling a mean baritone in the Glee Club, giving sage advice to wayward Freshmen (for Lee was always respected among the Freshmen as one who could swing a paddle if the occasion demanded it, but who would rather make his corrections by heart-to-heart talks); occasionally playing scrub football opposite his war-horse brother, Ed, or participating in a Monogram Club initiation. As a proof of the trust that his fellow classmates bestowed on him he was elected for a two-year term as a representative on the Student Council.

Perhaps, it was to give the other students a chance to catch up and perhaps it wasn't, but Lee was not seen on the campus last year. He chose rather the field of pedagogy. (N. B.—Greek for "driver of little children"), having for his post a high school at Darlington Heights, Va. He returned last fall, entering his same old class, and has proven a valuable asset to the curriculum in scrub football, in forensic activities, in basketball and, again in the, by no means, gentle art of knocking down first grades in class room work.

In forensics, "Lee" is widely known as an interscholastic debater of marked eloquence and logic. In student body meetings his word is worth listening to. On campus he is hailed as a man. Between the froth at the top and the silt at the bottom, he has steered his college career in a way to make any college proud of him. Rumor has it that he is a woman hater, but Dame Rumor is a prevaricating old woman herself, and if size and number of femininely addressed envelopes have a little meaning all their own—Hampden-Sidney will miss you next year, Lee, but the girl won't.

"BEN"

Five years ago Bennie ran in from V. E. S. to see what Hampden-Sidney was like; it suited him; he remained, and ever since that time he has been literally running his way through college. When he gets loose around end he gets so much speed up that it is an impossibility to stop him, and when you see a flock of sprinters coming down the track you can always take it for granted that the smoothly running machine ten yards ahead of the rest is "Ben" Smith. "Ben's" athletic achievements alone have been enough to make him famous, but the versatile lad from Willoughby Beach is known and loved for several other accomplishments. For one thing, "Bennie" is a good student, and there is never any worry about the team being handicapped by his ineligibility to play. Secondly, "Bennie" is indispensible to a bull meeting, and his store of jokes is practically endless. Last, but oh, how important, "Ben" is just about the greatest lover in College. The career of this young swain has been at times a rocky one, but he has the faithfulness of a Romeo, and we know that his story is sure to end up with the old "they lived happy ever after" finis. When you know of Ben Smith you admire him; when you know him you love him, for his personality and for his loyalty to his friends.

"PREACHER"

A sound from the room beneath you suddenly bursts upon your ears, and makes your windows rattle. Oh, no, it's nothing serious, it's just "Preacher" laughing, a jolly, contagious laugh that is a sure cure for the blues. And "Preacher" does other things as well as he laughs. Everyone knows that when he loosens up his collar, and cocks his feet on the table, he means business. "Preacher" has one failing—women. When he walks into the Normal, the ladies look, gasp, and then whisper. Those who are with them say that after that they are quite heartless, for "Preacher" has stolen those precious possessions. Also he has one of his own that is big and generous, and that has won for him many a warm friend among his fellow students. "Preacher" is not only a student, but he is somewhat of an athlete. Ever since we can remember he has been an invaluable aid to the baseball squad. Although you missed your H, we admire your sticking capacity, old boy. The publications, the Literary Society, everything would have suffered greatly had it not been for "Preacher," for he is a born artist of no mean talent. "J. Y."

Whenever "J. Y." shrilled a familiar "Hey" across the campus, somebody was certain to remark that he hailed from Crewe. Conservative and reserved his first two years, he bloomed out a regular Tiger lily thereafter.

In basketball he was most proficient, especially as a foul shooter; and no wonder. He took up his abode in the Y. M. C. A., where, with free access to the gym, he practiced shooting morning, noon, and night, and before breakfast, dinner, and supper, he took his daily dozens.

Then, too, he hustled about on the baseball diamond, and until measles overtook him, swung the old stick with a healthy swing.

His third—but, perhaps, it's just his first—weakness was—the fairer sex; but here we approach a mystery like unto the infinite divisibility of the line—there was no end to his.

"CAESAR"

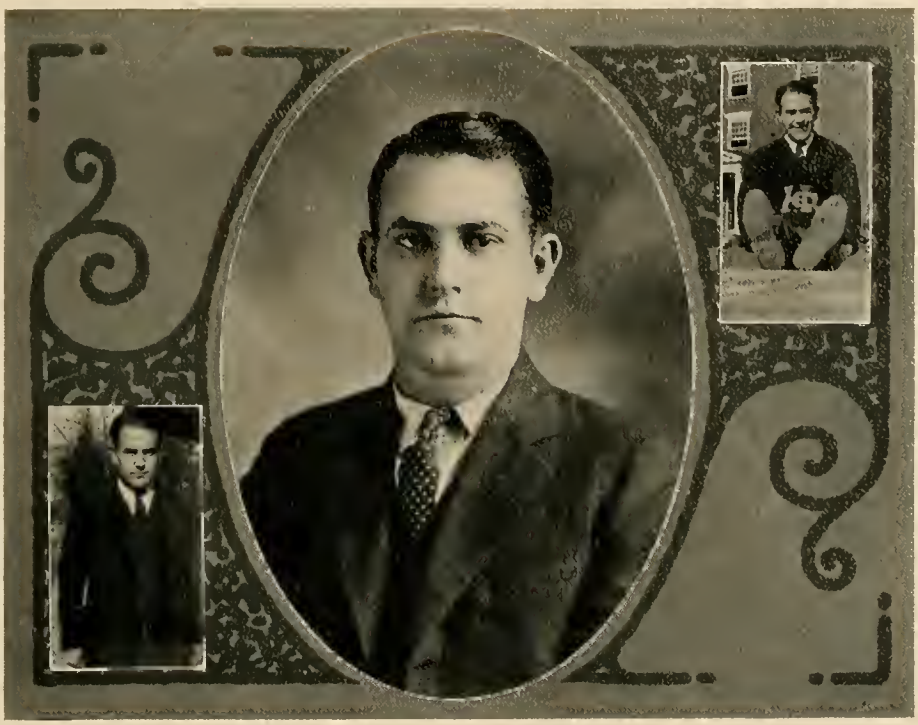

"Caesar had his Brutus, Charles I his Cromwell, and may the Sophomore Class profit by their example!" These eloquent words flowed from the tongue of the man whose picture looks at you from above, ere he had spent a week on Hampden-Sidney's historic campus. There followed the applause of brother Freshmen and the resounding whacks of the Sophomore's paddles. But despite such an auspicious entry and the subsequent cognomen of "Caesar," Tynes has made a name for himself on the campus.

In the classroom he has not always been a shining light, having always preferred free-thinking to what he termed parrot-learning. But the mere fact that he graduates in three years, instead of four, shows that the gray matter is there. As editor-in-chief of the Tiger, poet-lover, reviewer, literary genius of no mean ability, cosmopolite, orator, embryo football player, Mexican athlete, and what-not, he has proven that there is a possibility of biting off more than one can chew and chewing it, nevertheless.

Although cut out more for a cheer leader than an athlete, we found him sticking it out for three years on the Death Valley football squad, having downed in his time many an elusive back, and once we remember him staggering across the line in the mile race in a R-M track meet. If he sticks to everything as well as he stuck to athletics, he will make a mark for himself in the world.

As an orator at two Intermediate Celebrations, he has demonstrated the fact that he both could and couldn't. Whether the inspiration from his negro Sunday school gave him his minstrel idea or not, nevertheless he personally directed and put over the first minstrel that had been at H-S for many years. Though he cares not much for "indoor athletics," he occasionally limbers a wicked ankle which the ladies seem to appreciate.

Go to it, Finley, old boy! Keep up the good work, and you will yet land on top, probably as the President of the United States, or the editor of the Atlantic Monthly. Who knows?

"SHORTY"

"It's the little things that count," says a familiar proverb, and we turn back to the fall of '23. At the desk in Coach's office sits "Shorty," counting shekels. Yes, he was "quite the berries" as a manager, and, according to Tulane, he produced the "berries," too.

Were Swift living today, Shorty would be one of the leading characters in Gulliver's Travels. This being impossible, the character is all in "Shorty," and upon second thought, is not this what makes the midget mighty, anyway?

When Jessee first came to the Hill, it was the general impression that his extreme youth retarded his growth, but when it was observed that his beard was like Samson's, some of the older and wiser heads said, "Call him not Jesse, but 'Shorty,' for he will no higher climb."

As time progressed, it was observed that "Shorty" had a long head, a business eye, and a Harry Lauder disposition.

By the departure of this 100 per cent Tiger, a little bit goes but a great deal is lost. Hit 'em hard, "Shorty!" You can, you have, and you will do that, like the Tiger you are.

Class History

SENIORS

Far to the south in the twilight, lazily stretch the tobacco fields,
Sighing the wind through the pine trees, moaning complaints as it passes;
Nestled amid the tall oaks, old, rich in her store of tradition,
Mother of men through the ages, staunch and alive stands the college.
Over her ivy-clad walls, alert like some guardian angel,
Hangs like a halo the spirit—that spirit which makes Hampden-Sidney.

Memory like a magician carries us back to that autumn,
First when we entered these portals, weak—timid, yet strong in our weakness,
Gloriously proud of our numbers, men drawn from the nation's far corners,
Lustily then did the paddles, high swung by the hands of the Sophomores,
Fall on the men like a hailstorm, fell, mowing them down like a reaper.
Yet every blow was a scalpel, which cleverly used by a sculptor,
Fashions and molds toward the perfect the soft plastic clay which it shapens.

Quickly the sting of that first year, the lingering gall of subjection
Vanished, and just as a night moth slips out in the dark on its new wings,
We turned from the footsteps of others to find for ourselves our own traces.
This was the formative period, not only did we instruct others,
Our characters, dreams, and ambitions, all merged in the web spun about us;
Bruised in the dust of the gridiron, yet ever upholding the college,
Sharing with each other our joys, our triumphs, our wounds and our sorrows,
Cheerfully learning to sacrifice self that the common good prosper.

Swiftly, how swiftly the years pass, and we with their turning have rounded
The mark, and as Juniors sedate, we rise to our places as leaders,
Scattered are we, and a handful survive from the class that we entered with;
Yet in our very compactness—in the big littleness of our numbers,
Better still were we enabled to perfect those works that we strived for,
And at the last of the year how sadly we watched those departing,
Quick then to realize we, too, soon in their footsteps would follow.

Seniors at last and we puzzled, yet realized finally the process,
How by our mind's conscious effort, the more that we learned from our text books,
Still more we found that this knowledge, was only the smallest beginning,
Merely a bit of equipment to send us abroad on life's journey.
Classes from time immemorial have heralded claims for their greatness;
We, as a class, can lay claim to no epoch-making achievement.

Yet are we proud of this fact—that straight through our four years of life here,
Bounded by the link of affection, in harmony we worked together,
Broken by no petty quarrels, conservative, yet ever seeking
Progress and growth for the college—here, then, are the gifts that we offer.

Time weaves a haze of enchantment; some day in the far-away future,
Dimly our thoughts will return to wander again on this campus,
Back through the curtain of years to visit these spots we hold sacred.
Always may we in our heart shrines retain and remember that spirit,
Guard it as it ever watches us, silently guarding our footsteps,
Brave may it make us and loyal, and faithful, earnest and true.

HAMPDEN-SIDNEY COLLEGE

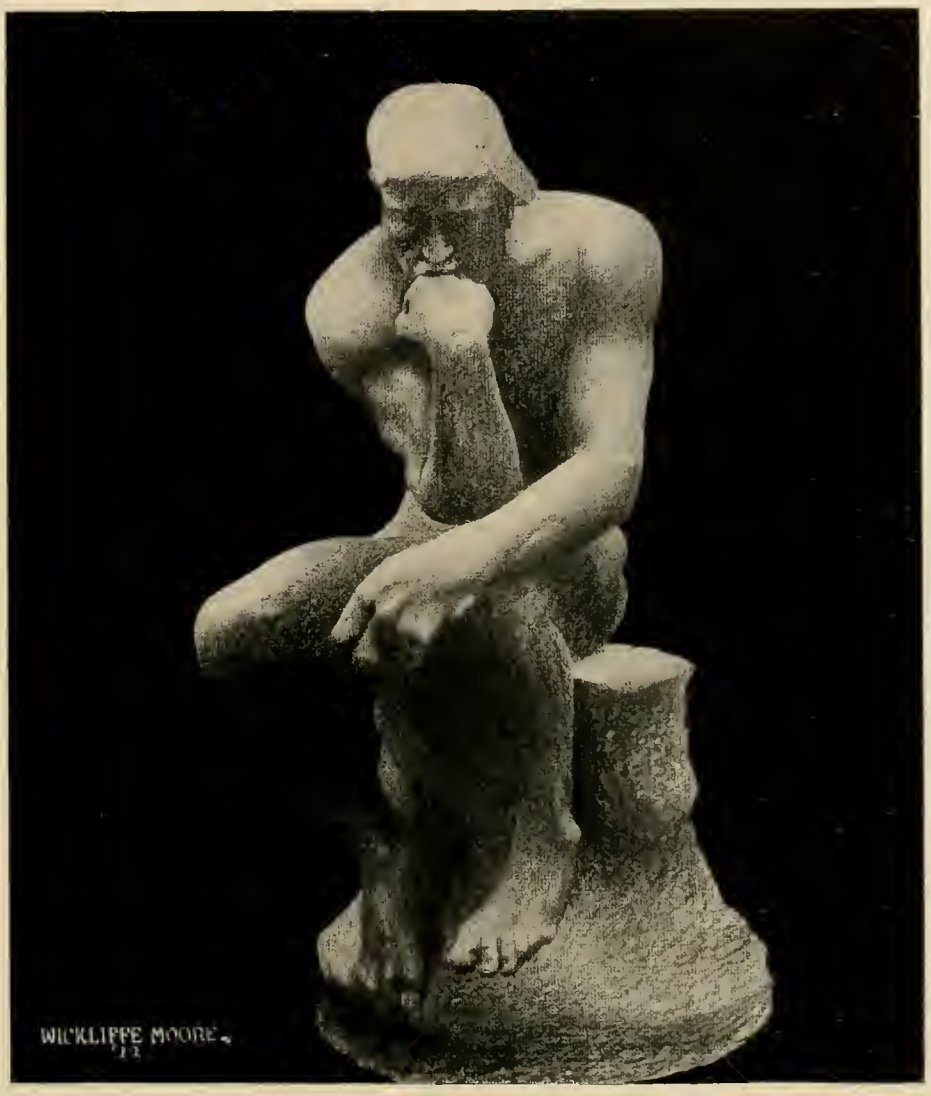

Their sacred names forever shall endure;
Our children's voices will be tender when
They speak of them with pride and awe, those men
Who offered up their bodies to insure
A world free from brutality, clean, pure,
And beautiful. No man is fit to pen
A tribute to those lads who fought and then Died on the battle ground. No golden lure
Was held to spur them on. They won the fight,
And these bronze tablets will commemorate
Their act as long as we live 'neath the sun;
They shall not die with man's approaching night,
But, living on, will happily celebrate
With Him, while the eternal ages run.

Class History

And in those days, there arose great contention among the tribes—the Seniorites, Juniorites, Sophomorites, and Freshets—as to which should be most powerful; for in the three years which preceded that year, the Seniorites, under the leadership of one Benjamin, a Smitherene, had held sway continuously. But there were among the Juniorites, those who strove for the supremacy of their tribe; and there were within the tribe of the Sophomorites, those who were desirous that their tribe should lead; while all of that tribe, known as the Freshets, less mindful of the serious things, of their extreme youth, and of their inexperience, clamored greatly to be chiefest.

Within the walls of the tabernacle, upon shelves of the archives, written upon scrolls in fine, golden letters, lay records for each tribe; yea, records for every tribe of that nation. First, and much to itself, lay a scroll, upon which was written in green-gold: "Far too fresh wherein to make an impression. Time will tell." To the right of this, and resting upon two other scrolls, was a scroll with these words, the letters of which were gold; yea, of 14-karat gold: "Smart in their own conceits; of warfare; skilled in the art of paddling; full of utterance." Beneath this scroll was another, the writing upon which was in letters of pure gold. In words flowing with milk and honey, the deeds of valiant Juniorites were set forth. Of the accomplishments of this tribe, the following should be set forth, in part, for that year: "When the tribes of the nation had come together, Jew Jitsy Tysonitus was selected from that tribe known as Juniorites, to be next to the chief man of the nation, and Harold, son of Dudley, was chosen to be next to the commander (Morganus) of the four armies, which were by name: Football, Basketball, Baseball, and Track. In the fall of the same year, the army of football camped on the field, Death Valley. Now, when lots had been cast in each tribe, it came to pass that the Juniorites sent ten chosen men to the army encamped, and these were: Cecil, the son of Blankenship, who distinguished himself on the left flank of the army, and was afterward chosen to lead the army; China, the son of Carter, and Jitsy, whose father's name was Tyson, both of the rear guard; Ed, son of Sager, who fought with those of the right flank; then, Ooley, son of Ott; Joseph, son of White; Clyde, of the family of de Hass; Archie, whose father's name was Jones; and that Archie, which also was called Archibald, son of Little—all of the reinforcements; and, finally, Andrew, whose father's name was McLaughlin, of that number which ministered unto the wounded. Bravely did those of the tribe of Juniorites distinguish themselves; most especially in the battles of Roanoke and Richmond, where Dunn—chosen from the tribe of Juniorites—led that portion of the nation, which refrained from war, in joying and sorrowing; yea, verily.

"And with the approach of winter, a new army was sent forth to relieve the first. Of those Juniorites, who were of the number of the first army, but two were among the number of the second; Joseph and Clyde. Now, when these, together with Ham, son of Fleming; Robert, son of Carden, and Harold; all defenders and guards to their army; also Richard, begot of Edmunds; and William, of the family of Reed, who was an aid unto the army; had come nigh unto that place known as the abode of one, Bernier; then it was that the field of battle was removed from the Valley of Death to the plains of Graham Gymnasium for winter quarters. And in the course of time, the armies of the Spiders, Hornets, and others came up to give battle against that nation, and always those members of the Juniorites well distinguished themselves.

"Now, when the winter began to wane, and the spring was drawing nigh, there was a call to the third and fourth armies; that they should journey down to the Valley of Death, and there defend the nation against all attacks. In like manner as before, the Juniorites chose six of its bravest men, and sent them with the Army of Baseball to the field of battle; volunteers were forthcoming, too, to that other army—Track. And of the defense of that former army, Davidson, Ott, Dudley, and Fleming were among the foremost, while Edmunds stood ready at hand to relieve the weary. Gillespie and McLaughlin were foremost in the army, Track.

"Now, in this nation, there were appointed those who should report the outcome of all battles, and these were known as Tigerites. To the number of eight Juniorites served office by this name. Fleming; Dabney, son of Simpson; Coleman, the Hill-topper; Barger, Little, Edmunds, Reed, and Dudley reported continually; nor did they cease from reporting even after those times when their reports were withheld; nor were they published sometimes for the space of a fortnight, sometimes more.

"And it came to pass, that there were formed two divisions; the one for the writing of the affairs of that nation, and the members of this one were called Magazinites; while the second was for the keeping of the records of that nation, and the members of this division were called Kaleidoscopites. Now, among the writers of the former, there were found MacPherson, a young man, a lover of music; also Barger, who much delighted in sweet chords. These had as fellow-tribesmen and fellow-writers, McDanald, Dudley, and Noel. Among that latter division were also found some of that tribe, known as Juniorites: Reed, Turner, and Gillespie."

And, so the records on the third scroll end, but, they are not yet at an end, for, as a seer among seers, if historians are prophets, look ye well to it that this tribe, known to many as the tribe of the Juniorites, shall lead the rest of the nation of Tigerdom; if not in the class meet wherein all the prowesses herein mentioned shall be exhibited, then as successors to that tribe which now calls itself Seniorites.

SOPHOMORES

Nearly two years have elapsed since we arrived at old Hampden-Sidney and were, apparently, welcomed with a glad hand and a cheerful word. But how quickly were we disillusioned as, at midnight, the brazen clangor of the old college bell and the terrifying cry of "Freshman! Freshman!" rent the air, calling us from our happy dreams of home.

And now, for the second time in its career, the Class of '26 comes before the public, not as verdant Freshmen, but clothed in the garb of dignified Sophomores. We have left our childish ways behind us, the days of our infancy have passed. No more will the old college bell summon us from our dreams of home to the dreadful reality of a hostile environment or the cry of "Freshman! Freshman!" strike terror to our once timorous hearts.

Many of our class have dropped out of the race, but we have had the pleasure of welcoming into our midst many new members. As Sophomores, we have inherited a Freshman Class and many fatherly duties toward it. And right gladly and diligently have we performed these tasks, teaching the Freshmen all the ways and customs of Hampden-Sidney as they had been taught unto us. Many were the evening entertainments that we staged in their honor and for their benefits, but, sad to relate, they were not duly appreciative of the honor shown them. In return we had only the consolation of a duty well done.

In the midst of all this we have by no means neglected our studies and other college activities. We can safely say that the names of several sharks are on our roll, while in the literary and forensic circles we are not without a good representation.

When athletics called, the Sophomore Class sent its full quota to battle for Hampden-Sidney, and right bravely did they fight. In fact, statistics show that one of our number is the best baseball player on the Hill.

We look forward with feelings of eagerness and delight to the time when we shall attain to the honor of being Juniors, and yet, when we glance back over the past year and realize that in a short while our Sophomore days will be nothing but a memory, "A feeling of sadness steals o'er us." No more shall we be gay and light-hearted Sophomores, whose only thought is to initiate the Freshmen into college life properly and to see that they are made comfortable.

A shrill blast of the referee's whistle! A thud as the toe of the player met the pigskin! And the long-looked-for game was on—the game of life at Hampden-Sidney.

The game as seen from the bowl was played well—exciting and fascinating. Among the players appeared many wearing little red and gray caps; this was the first quarter for them and they found many things very strange and interesting. Let us observe those caps and watch their wearers play the game. It was a curious game, with professors, Sophomores and others, and the wearers of the small caps soon learned they were to be known as Freshmen. And it seemed to be the duty of all to teach the Frosh the game.

The profs, they shot us quite a line,
 They told us to remember,
"Or burst the course you surely will,
 Exams come in Juvember!

The Sophomores must have been our friends,
 For the whole aggregation
Taught many a lesson we should learn
 With the Board of Education.

The laundry list—tune, "Home, Sweet Home," Sophs oft' required to hear;
"And, Freshman, when you take a shower,
 Have a match behind your ear."

Before this college game is over,
 You'll see the Frosh Eleven
Drive down for a winning touchdown;
 It's the Class of TWENTY-SEVEN.

Tiger Spirit

Some boast of the Fighting Spirit—a spirit that signifies hard playing and a determination to win.

Some boast of the College Spirit—a spirit that signifies loyalty to one's Alma Mater and all college activities.

Others boast of the Sporting Spirit—a spirit that means fair play and good sportsmanship.

We boast of that old Tiger Spirit—a spirit that combines fight, determination, sportsmanship, and loyalty.

THE 1923 FOOTBALL SQUAD

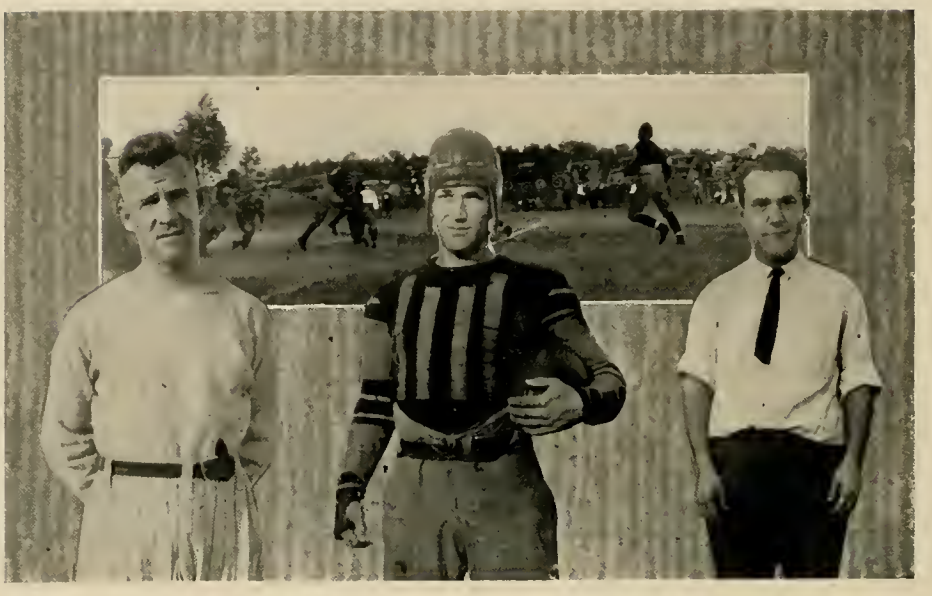

The Season of 1923

Those loyal sons of Hampden-Sidney who have, each year, defended with their blood and muscle the honor of their Alma Mater, deserve a more fitting tribute than a mere praise of words. They have given their best in her behalf, have fought for her, have avenged her defeats, have righted her wrongs—all because of the love they bear for old Hampden-Sidney. Those students and former students not fighting on the field or on the court with the team were giving their vocal support lustily from the side lines. If there is spirit to back it, the team quickens and fights; if there is no spirit backing it, the team lags, loses heart, and loses games. Success on the field and on the court depends as much on the student body as on the players.

The season of 1923 verified and upheld all legends and traditions of that intangible, indefinable something—"Tiger Spirit." The student body remained solidly behind the team, fighting heart and soul with it, cheering it when the game went well, and when it did not go so well. To that unbeatable spirit of Hampden-Sidney displayed, we attribute much credit for the season's successes. The team fought, win, lose, or draw, and knew the student body was behind it to a man.

The season just past marks another advance of Hampden-Sidney, and an advance that promises much for the future. To her folds returned that former student, athlete, and later, coach, of Tiger teams—"Yank" Bernier, heeding again the call of the Tiger Spirit. Under his tutelage and leadership, the various teams fought through the seasons, and gave a good account of themselves, although the results were not always favorable from a standpoint of scores.

Forty-odd men reported on September 5 for pre-season football practice, and by the time of the opening game with Va. Tech, Coach Bernier had whipped into shape a well-conditioned scrapping pack of Tigers. "It was the best conditioned Tiger team seen on Miles Field in years, and the score does not indicate the real strength of the fighting Tigers from Hampden-Sidney. Charlie Bernier hurled a green team against the Gobblers today, but they showed fight and lots of it. Time after time the visitors threw the Gobblers back for losses, and, on two occasions, it looked as though they would score . . . once when Brenaman broke loose around left end and distanced everybody but the Tech's safety man who made the tackle, and again when line bucks had carried the ball down the field to the Tech's five-yard line, where an attempted forward pass failed . . . inexperience was the main cause of the Tigers' downfall."—The Roanoke Times.

Coach Bernier was handicapped throughout the early part of the season by this inexperience, and by the fact that several former stars were ruled ineligible by the Virginia-North Carolina Athletic Association, of which Hampden-Sidney is a member. The inexperience showed itself in the string of defeats following the Union Theological Seminary game, then, as the team gradually found itself, the value of the fundamentals stressed so much in early season practice was realized. The Tigers annexed the Seminary game by a score of 19-9, but lost successively to Elon, Roanoke, and William and Mary. Emory and Henry met a 20-0 defeat in Death Valley, and Randolph-Macon was defeated on Mayo Island Field in Richmond by a score of 25-6 the Saturday following the University of Richmond game on Stadium Field, which the Spiders won, 7-6. In this game the Tigers' kick after touchdown struck the crossbar and bounded under, robbing the Tigers of, at least, a tie score. On Thanksgiving Day, five days after the Randolph-Macon game, Lynchburg won by a score of 22-19, on the Fair Grounds Field in Lynchburg. Thus, from a standpoint of scores and points, Hampden-Sidney's 1923 season was not a brilliant success, but looking toward the future, it was a step upward to better records. Building for the future, always building, Coach Bernier has laid the foundation of better and stronger Tiger teams.

The U. T. S. game was played on a hot and sultry day, and was slow and listless, featured only by several long runs for touchdowns. Sager thrilled the spectators in the first quarter by recovering a Seminary fumble and running forty yards for a score. Adkins received the opening kick-off of the second half, and repeated this run for a touchdown, and "Jamie" Tyson completed a twenty-yard pass from Carter, carrying the ball twenty-five yards for another score in the final period. The Tigers were confronted by several former teammates in this game—Luke, McKelway, Adams, Brittenhirt, and Sanders, whose seventy-yard punt saved the Richmond game for the Tigers of 1921. Elon's use of the forward pass won the next game, the following Saturday in Elon, by the score of 12-7. Smith featured the game by his end runs, and carried the ball over for his team's only score. The work-together spirit was lacking at Elon, but against Roanoke in Death Valley the next Saturday, the old fight reasserted itself and Roanoke was able to score only by the aerial route, Hinckle and Ott, at the ends, preventing a successful flank attack. "Both touchdowns resulted directly from long forward passes. McConnell, playing sleeping end, caught a forty-yard pass from Caldwell, and ran ten yards for goal. Oakey added the next score after completing a thirty-five yard pass from Caldwell, who made the pass from a fake formation. The feature of the game was the work of the Hampden-Sidney line, which throughout the game held the visitors, one time for four downs on the one-foot line, and three times on the two-yard line. At least four times Roanoke made first down by a matter of inches, on the fourth down."—The Richmond Times Dispatch. William and Mary defeated the Tigers for the second time in fourteen years, the next Saturday in Norfolk. Again the work-together spirit was missing, and " the Indians repeatedly sifted through the Tiger line, and stopped the offensive. F. Tyson played a fine backfield game until injured. The work of Hurt at left end was good, as was that of Captain Fuqua at Guard, until he retired because of injuries. The playing of the Tigers was spirited throughout the game, but was too erratic to stop the Indian advances."—The Norfolk Ledger-Dispatch.

Coming from under this string of defeats, Hampden-Sidney, the next week, defeated Emory and Henry in Death Valley by a score of 20-0. Blankenship was the proverbial "stone wall" on defense, and with Hinckle, secured a safety for his team in the final period. The Tigers in this game began to show promise of the aerial attack—a promise which was fulfilled against the Spiders, when three passes carried the ball nearly ninety yards for the Tigers' touchdown, "Jamie" Tyson receiving the ball over the line. "Lady Luck" robbed Hampden-Sidney of a tie score when the kick after touchdown struck the cross bar and bounded under. Richardson played the pivot position in a cool and steady manner, and Hinckle, at right end, turned the Spiders back consistently, several times for losses. Randolph-Macon fell before the Tigers by a score of 25-6, on the Mayo Island Field in Richmond the following week, in a game somewhat ragged because of the mud, but featured by several long runs. Smith received a kick-off and ran the entire length of the field for a touchdown, and twice ran back punts for scores, only one of which was counted, a penalty causing the ball to be brought back on the second occasion. "China" Carter exhibited pretty head work and saved a bad situation, when he recovered a fumble by one of his own backs and handed the ball to F. Tyson, who went off-tackle for a considerable gain. The play was carried out so nicely that it appeared to be a real fake play. Five days later in Lynchburg, and again on a muddy field, the Tigers were defeated by that age-old "Statue of Liberty" play. Reed and Eldridge, at the guard positions, time after time smeared Lynchburg's offensive, the latter scoring six points for his team by recovering a Lynchburg fumble over the line. Hinckle made a long forward pass good for another six points, but Lynchburg's field goal, kicked in the final period, proved to be the margin of safety that finally saved the game for them.

The season of 1923 ended with the Tigers having a total of 106 points to their opponents' 118. Seven or more letter men will return to Death Valley for the season of 1924, and with the continued fine support of the student body, led by Cheer Leader "Reggie" Dunn, and the building-system of Coach Bernier, the Tiger team will once again sharpen its claws upon all comers. Time will tell.

FOOTBALL NON-LETTER MEN

THE 1924 BASKETBALL SQUAD

The Season of 1924

On the basketball floor, as on the gridiron this least season, Hampden-Sidney was handicapped by a lack of seasoned material. Captain Carter did not return to college, and the close guarding and the floor work of Southall were lost to the Garnet and Gray for the same reason. Captain Carter was picked by the Virginia Pilot for the mythical quint representing the secondary colleges of the South, last season, and had been depended upon to do a great deal of his team's scoring this year. The absence of both Carter and Southall was felt keenly. Sager, letter-man of the 1922 team, being the only letter-man left on the squad, Coach Bernier was at a loss for material on which to build, since Fleming and Hurt were the only other former Varsity men. However, Adkins, Tyson, and Harper were developed to fill the positions of center and forwards, respectively; DeHaas and Moore alternated with them, and Carden, Sager, Hurt, and H. Dudley alternated at the guard positions. The squad was, on the whole, inexperienced and green, but quickly found itself—and then the green changed rapidly to red. The same Tiger spirit was evidenced in every game, and whatever the score, the Tigers played the same brand of ball consistently, playing to win as long as there was left one fractional part of a minute, and fighting harder as the time grew shorter. Those who have seen Tigers play, know the difference between losing and being beaten; Hampden-Sidney has lost, but she has never been beaten; she will lose in the future, but she will never be beaten.

In the opening game of the year, the Farmville Athletic Club was downed in a fast game, featured by the work of Fleming for Hampden-Sidney, and of Roundy for Farmville. This first game showed that Coach Bernier had done much in a little time. The Seminary quint was defeated in a close game in Graham Gym, by the count of 25-23, and this was followed by another win from the Farmville Athletic Club on the Armory floor in Farmville. On a three-game trip to Richmond, the Tigers won from the Medical College after an extra period had to be played, but dropped the next two to the Spiders and the Seminary quint. Against the Spiders, the Tigers put up a superb game in the first half, which ended 22-20 in the Spiders' favor, but in the final period the fast passing and floor work of the Spiders, coupled with their uncanny ability to sink long shots, spelled defeat for Hampden-Sidney. The game was cleanly fought all the way through, but all the Tiger-Spider rivalry was there, just the same. In the Seminary game, Hampden-Sidney was defeated mainly through the work of two Tiger alumni, "Lo" Sanders and John Luke. Meeting Wake Forest the next night on the home floor, the Tigers lost to the Carolinians by a count of 24-18. The losing streak was broken in the third game against Farmville, which the Tigers won by six points. Fast and accurate shooting by Harper and Adkins, just before the game ended, saved the game for H.-S. when Roundy's long shots began to look as if they would knot the score in the last few minutes of the game. The Medicos took the next game from us by the narrow margin of one point, when, in a scramble for the possession of a ball under their basket, an unlucky twist of the wrist by a Tiger forward shot a basket for the Medicos, which put them in the lead by one point. The Spiders came to the Hill for the next game and went back with the long end of a 21-10 count. Miller and Fagan led the Spiders in baskets, and gave a perfect picture of balance and co-ordination. This was the first appearance of a Spider team on the Hill for a number of years, and it marked the largest crowd in the history of Graham Gym. Randolph-Macon was taken on, and in the most exciting and thrilling game of the season, the Tigers won by the narrow margin of one point, 13-12. The Yellow Jackets played a fine game, and in a sportsmanlike manner, exhibiting some of the best floor work seen on the local court this year. Lynchburg took the next two games, both here and in Lynchburg, where the old jinx once more put in an appearance. With about three seconds of play remaining, and with the Tigers holding a one point lead, Lynchburg made a basket on a follow-up shot, and the game was over before the ball struck the floor. Guilford brought the best balanced and smoothest working quint seen on the local floor this season. The last game of the year was lost to V. M. I. in Lexington, by the count of 21-11.

The Tigers won; they lost—but they gained infinitely more than they lost. The experiences undergone this year will prove mighty valuable next winter when once more the uniforms are donned. The Tigers will fight to, and through, the last minute of the last game of the year as though it were the first minute of the first game of the year. That is the spirit which counts.

The 1924 Baseball Prospectus

AS the Kaleidoscope goes to press, baseball is the order of the day. Forty Tigers with Coach "Yank" Bernier are taking their daily workouts on the diamond. Things look good! We do not mean by this that we have nine lettermen back, for, as a matter of fact, we have but five. But what we intend to say is that we have out a good crowd of likely looking youngsters, all on their toes, and with heads up, ready to learn how it is done and then eager to do it.

With these willing recruits filling in alongside of Ott, the "centerfield wall," and Davidson of last year's varsity in left field, and Smith, the "Tiger flash," in right, our secondary defense will be well provided for.

Brenaman and Dudley, last year's star battery, seem more determined than ever to keep the ball to themselves. Brenaman has not only proven his worth to local fans, but he is considered one of the best college and amateur pitchers of the state. Dudley, his battery mate, possesses a cool head, a good throwing arm, and is always in there with lots of spunk and fight. J. R. Smith, of the reserves, and Hundley and "Lefty" Adkins, of the new men, are pretty sure to see service on the mound.

From last year's reserves, Fleming, Palmer and Liesfeld are showing up particularly well. At the present time this trio with Brinser, Harris, and Tyson of the Freshmen candidates have stolen all of the bases and are waging a battle royal over them.

Of the Freshmen, Harris, Tyson, Brinser, Hundley, Leftwich, Robinson, and "Lefty" Adkins seem to be the most likely candidates.

Manager McDonald has succeeded in arranging a schedule providing for games with the best teams of Virginia and North Carolina.

The 1924 Track Prospects

Back in 1922 a revival of interest was shown in track and a short time thereafter track was made a major sport at Hampden-Sidney. However, without a coach, without money, without equipment, it seemed that the track enthusiasts were doomed to a bitter disappointment. But this year with an improved track, new equipment, and the services of Coach Chas. A. Bernier, as director, it seems that this, the oldest of games and long neglected sport, is coming into its own. Every school has the other sports, but only the most progressive and highly-spirited can boast a good track team. Hampden-Sidney is coming into her own! Only recently the Tiger relay team won the indoor relay race from Randolph-Macon and thus made an auspicious entrance in the field of track activities. In the future, entries will be placed in the important meets provided the candidates show enough form to justify it.

Thus far it is too early to permit any very accurate data on individual men, but Ben Smith, Brenaman, Ott, Holladay, and Richardson bid fair to give some one a hard race in the dashes, and McLaughlin and Alexander are rapidly getting into shape for the distances. Morgan, Leftwich, Dudley, and P. Holladay are working hard on the field events. Manager Gillespie announces the following schedule for the 1924 season:

Date.	Team.	Place.
April 5	The Annual Interclass Meet	Home

The Seasons of 1923 and 1924

Tennis gained prominence in 1923 as a Tiger sport, and the team that represented Hampden-Sidney won an undisputed title to the Intercollegiate Championship of Eastern Virginia. By virtue of victories over the University of Richmond and Randolph-Macon, and a forfeit from William and Mary (her team withdrawing before finishing the match), the Tiger racqueteers demonstrated their superiority over their opponents. Richmond was defeated twice, Randolph-Macon once, and William and Mary withdrew in the midst of the match.

The men composing the championship team were: B. S. Morgan, Jr., Captain; M. H. Bittinger, A. J. McKelway, S. P. Jones (letter men), and Bob Stoltz and H. H. Coleman. Much credit for the success of the team is due to its manager, John Marshall.

The outlook for the 1924 season is good. Coach Winston, with Bittinger and Morgan, two-year letter-men, as a nucleus around which to build, bids fair to turn out another winning combination.

To date, Manager Coleman has succeeded in arranging quite an extensive schedule. A tentative schedule follows:

Date.	Team.	Place.

A Few Famous Tigers

Rev. Thos. "Six" Hooper, '01

Star quarterback on the 1900 football team which established a record on the road unequaled to date, viz: "On successive days they walloped Randolph-Macon and William and Mary, rested on Sunday, and then whaled the daylight out of Richmond College on the following day."—Richmond Times Dispatch. Tom Hooper's great generalship and open field running is still fresh in the minds on the campus.

Francis Worth Payne, '12

First Hampden-Sidney man killed in the World War. Francis was an outstanding end in the state '09-'10-'11. Captain of 1912 team. Made end on the all-E. V. I. A. A. mythical eleven, 1911-1912.

Dr. Frank Johns, '08

Here, boys, was the best halfback in the state when he wore a Tiger uniform. Known on Virginia grids for his heady play. He was also a three-letter man, playing a bang-up game on the court and on the diamond. Later he played on championship teams of the Medical College of Virginia. Now a well-known and successful surgeon in Richmond.

Rev. Marvin "Red" Bowling, '15

"Red" Bowling, the "red latch" center rush of the famous Tigers of 1911-'12-'13-'14. Made the "All-State" team two years. "Red" was a great defensive man, as center playing a roving game to the queen's taste.

In four years he was never taken out of a game, proving that he had durability to the *n*th degree. Now preaching in North Carolina.

Loyal Clark Benedict, '14

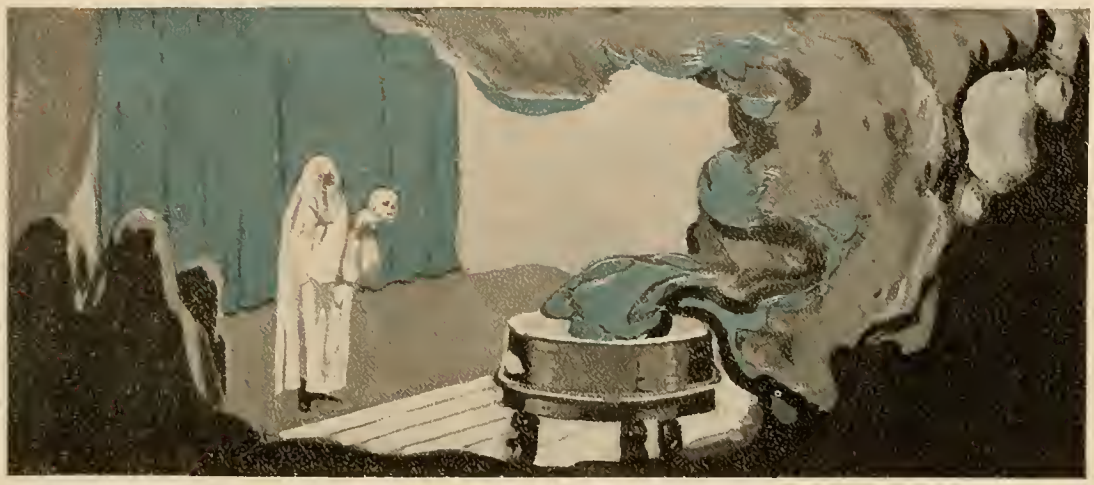

Loyal Benedict played tackle 1909-'10-'11-'12. Captain, 1912. Later went to V. P. I., and while playing there was picked as an "All-Southern" tackle. "Bennie" was famous for his tackle around tackle run. Now holding a responsible position with the Westinghouse Electric Company.

Dr. Wallace Blanton, '12

"Wallie" Blanton of Richmond was about the slickest open field man on Virginia gridirons during 1909-'10-'11-'12. Starred on the court, played a forward position, an accurate shot, and noted for his floor work. He also played baseball and was an all-around track man. Now practicing medicine with his famous father, Dr. C. A. Blanton, and his brother, Dr. Wyndham Blanton.

Frank D. Eble, '13

Coach Bernier gives "Jim" Eble a big boost as an end. His greatest playing was against the University of Virginia in 1912. "Jim" captained the team of 1913 and few ends were better on the defense, while on the offense he took the opposing tackle "away." Now a successful real estate man in Richmond.

Shenandoah Valley

For who that once sees the glories of these hills,
Sun-kissed or wrapped in cloud, and does not raise
His eyes in adoration, and from out a
Full heart pour forth a silent song of praise?

Wherever rests the eye, at morn or eve,
On every hand one sees new beauties rise,
Each lovelier than the rest, to thrill the soul
Of minstrel bard, and lift him to the skies.

Scrambled History

22—Intermediate dances begin—much imported "calic" on Hill. Phi goats parade before the Normal School. Coleman goes to Richmond, and sneaks into performance of "Wild Oats." Meets Fisher coming out.

23—Last night of dances—too cold to stroll over the campus at Intermission—(Damn!) Annual celebration between Unions and Phips is held in Chapel.

25—"Snapper" returns. Surprises classes by giving assignments of usual length.

27—Jimmy Bowers gums John Marston's date.

29—John Marston gums Jimmy Bower's date.

MARCH

4—"Gov." Trinkle wins prize as best dancer at Leap Year dance in Richmond. Got quite a rush. Wore soft collars for three days after returning to the Hill.

6—Bats and balls in Death Valley.

7—"Derr Crot" Richardson's bed bursts into flames.

8—Goodman feels the urge of spring.

9—"B. S." is seen to carry a cradle down Fraternity Row.

10—Second term exams and snowstorm arrive together.

11—All lights go out again—of all the luck—and just at exam time.

12—Much slush and horse play. "Uncle Aggie" runs true to form on Latin III exam!

13—"Neptune" Nance sleeps through "Bag's" Physics I exam. Lucky to get through at all.

14—Weeping.

15—Wailing.

16—Gnashing of teeth.

17—Prof. Overcash picks Biology I exam questions from footnotes and introduction to text-book.

18—"Recognition test" of English poetry on "Asa D's" English II exam develops into a guessing contest.

19—Last day of exams. Come on June!

20—KALEIDOSCOPE goes to press and the staff goes to bed.

21—Third term begins.

22—Third term gets under way.

23—Third term under full headway. "Uncle Aggie" about three jumps ahead of everybody.

25—John Marston gums Jimmy Bowers' date.

27—Jimmy Bowers gums John Marston's date.

31—Senior canes appear. "Bags" and "Asa D" throw their's away.

APRIL

1—Bob Roberts asks Dean Reed for an excuse for absence from College, and actually gets it! (April fool!!)

5—"Preacher" Smith holds the Scrubs to nine scattered hits. Student Council is hot on "Preacher's" trail for stealing a base.

9—Dr. Booker is called up before the faculty for throwing Wrigley's wrappers on the campus.

15—Rumor has it that "Prexy" was on the Hill today.

17—"Ham" Fleming is released from probation for overcutting chapel.

20—Coleman sends a corsage to Gloria.

MAY

1—Miss Alice is crowned "Queen of the May-l."

2—Correct this sentence: Freshman Dudley has a match.

6—Liberals regain seats on the Student Council. They now have a slim minority.

9—"Preacher" Smith gracefully accepts the Chair of Biology of Hampden-Sidney College.

11—Big Barger loses lengthy debate. Dean Reed proves to be more forceful in his arguments, especially his rebuttal.

15—We believe the faculty must all have taken a course in law somewhere before coming to the Hill. If you don't believe it, try to argue for an excuse for a chapel absence.
